Today's Keynote Speaker

Dr. Michael Staten

Dr. Michael Staten has spent half of his career in the academic world and half in the public policy world. He spent the first eight years of his career as a faculty member in an economics department (University of Delaware). He then spent the next 20 years as director of academic research centers (at Purdue University, Georgetown University, and George Washington University) that focused on public policy affecting retail financial services, especially with respect to companies that provide consumers with credit cards, auto loans, mortgage loans and a host of other credit products.

Since joining the faculty of the Norton School at the University of Arizona in December 2007, Dr. Staten has directed the Take Charge America Institute (TCAI) for consumer financial education and research. He is still working on financial services issues, but this time by helping to build financial literacy, especially among America's youth. He remains delighted to be a part of the University's effort to build financial education programs that are now being used by tens of thousands of teachers across the country.

General Sessions

"Keeping Score"

Rod Griffin, Experian

An overview of credit reporting and credit scoring that will help you answer the fundamental question, "What can I do to ensure I have the credit history and credit scores I need to qualify for the credit I want?"

"Chalk Talk"

A networking session consisting of four topics (teachers select two) that teachers can network with share best practices. Networking topics are Saving & Investing, Credit & Debt, Risk Management & Insurance, and Financial Responsibility and Decision Making.

Concurrent Sessions

What's a Checkbook? New Ways Kids (and Adults) are Managing Money.

Nathan Saller, Vice President, Bellwether Community Credit Union

From websites to mobile financial applications, the way people manage their finances is changing. Some technologies make it harder to make wise financial decision while others can actually enhance a person's financial knowledge and help them to be more aware of potential pitfalls. Learn how to jump into the game and relate more to the next generation.

MoneySKILL

M. Susie Irvine, President & CEO, AFSA Education Foundation

Learn how to use this resource in the classroom. This curriculum educates high school students on the basic understanding of money management fundamentals in the content areas of income, expenses, assets, liabilities and risk management. The course is designed to be used as all or part of a course in economics, math, social studies or wherever personal finances are taught. Students can access the modules in the classroom or at home.

Making Your Investments Work for You

Theresa Huntley, RBC Wealth Management

This interactive session is designed as a town-hall setting where teachers submit questions and the speakers will answer them. Submit your top-two questions when you register for the conference.

The High School Financial Planning Program

Ann Hamilton and Kathy Jablonski, UNH Cooperative Extension Educators

Learn how to include this curriculum in your classroom. This evaluated curriculum makes a difference in your students' lives. The High School Financial Planning Program has been developed to alert, inform and educate high school students about sound money management skills and financial planning. This session is designed for teachers new to the High School Financial Planning Program.

About the Conference

The MoneySmarts conference helps educators increase their personal financial literacy skills to enhance current curriculum, or incorporate and implement curriculum. Considering the following statistics, the need for these fundamental life skills in our students is more important than ever.

- ▶ 78% of college students work in the summer, 55% during the school year
- ▶ 68% get money from home averaging $285 monthly
- ▶ 40% (down from 44% last year and 53% three years ago) have a credit card in their own name
- ▶ Average college student cardholder has 1.2 cards (79% have one card, 19% two cards, and 6% three or more cards)
